Whereas the Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham (ISIS) has committed acts of terrorism, crimes against humanity and continues to threaten the security and stability of the Middle East;

Whereas successful battles against Iraqi security forces have provided ISIS with advanced weapons systems and armored vehicles, severely limiting the Kurdish Peshmerga forces' capabilities against ISIS;

Whereas the strain of combat against ISIS has depleted the Kurdish Peshmerga forces' weapons caches, leaving them lightly armed and inadequately equipped to counter the better-equipped ISIS force;

Whereas the Kurdish Peshmerga forces are a longtime ally of the United States and are perfectly positioned to effectively fight against ISIS and have recently asked for material and non-material support;

Whereas Department of Defense spokesman, Rear Admiral John Kirby, confirmed that the Department of Defense knows what the Kurdish Peshmerga forces need to combat ISIS;

Whereas Albania, Canada, Croatia, Denmark, Italy, France, Germany, and the United Kingdom have committed to supplying arms to the Kurdish Peshmerga forces; and

Whereas the United States, through the Department of Defense, have provided no meaningful military equipment, weapons, ammunition or other needed materials to the Kurdish Peshmerga forces: Now, therefore, be it
